LEARNING ENVIRONMENT

The best way to learn what life as a veterinary technician is like is to experience it first hand. Students at the Vet Tech Institute have access to an on-site kennel for training with companion animals. Large animal practicums are conducted at off-site locations so that students also experience training with large animals.

In addition to the full kennel, the Vet Tech Institute’s facilities include clinical pathology labs, radiological labs, prep rooms, and surgery rooms, so students can practice what they have learned in lecture classes. From preparing a dog for surgery to conducting a routine exam on a rabbit, Vet Tech Institute students learn by doing.

As a vet tech student, you’ll have access to an on-site kennel and a large animal facility.

Vet tech students are in rotation for kennel duty, and are responsible for administering medicine and caring for the animals in the kennel.

“As a student at Vet Tech Institute of Houston, I have received a great education, hands-on training for experience, and have met a wonderful staff who has helped me achieve my goals in my career.”

Ginger Chavez
Veterinary Technician Graduate